Fellowship Month Special - Guest book preserves stories of early Rotary Friendships

A guest book signed by many visitors to Rotary founder Paul Harris' home shares the words that some of Rotary's early members used to express their friendship. The book is preserved in Rotary's archives in Evanston, Illinois.

Harris and his wife, Jean, bought their home in Morgan Park, which was then a suburb of Chicago, Illinois, USA, in 1912. There they entertained friends from Chicago and around the world, hosting meetings and reunions of the Rotary Club of Chicago.

Guests signed the book over many years. It includes a 1915 calendar, along with entries dated from 1919 onward. Although some guests simply signed their names and perhaps noted the dates of their visits, others left longer messages. The pages offer reflections on friendship, lasting connections, and what members loved about Rotary.

The dates printed on the pages don't match the actual dates of most of the visits. Instead, it appears that many visitors signed the page with their birthday. Harris himself, a lawyer, used the book to take notes on a few meetings with his clients.

Few Archives:

Estes Snedecor, no date. Known as Pete to his friends, Snedecor belonged to the Rotary Club of Portland, Oregon, USA, and was the Rotary president in 1920-21. "It is always a joy to visit the home of Harris — the oracle of Rotary."

Federico A. Pezet, 30 April 1919. Pezet helped introduce Rotary to Peru and several years later joined the Rotary Club of Lima. "Born into this world on this day I have gone along my life feeling that there was something to be done that was worth the doing. And, now, that I have been born into Rotary I know that I have found that something which I was seeking — your creation, dear Paul, will be from now on my inspiration. And I hope that the work now before me will be accomplished as thoroughly as has been yours."

Chesley R. Perry, 1934. A member of the Rotary Club of Chicago, Perry served as Rotary's first general secretary from 1910 to 1942. "You haven't asked [me] to write in your book but I am going to do so because I do not want to be missing from any record of your friends and admirers."

Edgar F. Allen, no date. A member of the Rotary Club of Elyria, Ohio, USA. In 1919, Allen founded the National Society for Crippled Children, which is now called Easterseals. Harris chaired the society's first board of directors. "I thank you for the two hours on your porch. It has been an inspiration."

Maurice Duperrey, no date. Duperrey was a member of the Rotary Club of Paris, France, and served as Rotary International president in 1937-38. "As a token of admiration, to the founder of Rotary International, whose name shines on the world, as a beacon guiding humans toward a better future of peace, harmony, and fraternity."

Sydney W. Pascall, 7 July 1932. Pascall belonged to the Rotary Club of London, England, and served as Rotary International president in 1931-32. "Fellowship in service through service in fellowship."

"The Foundation upon which Rotary is built is friendship; on no less firm foundation could it have stood."
